FROM MICHIGAN.

ANN ARBOR, MICH., Sep. 30, 1876. Mr. Editor: Agreeable to my promise I will write you a chort description of my trip here, together with a description of the country, people and political affairs of this

I left Mexico on the morning of the 26th and was borne along rapidlv, until we landed in Chicago, about 3 1-2 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Nothing of interest transpired in this part of my journey. The country along which I passed was a beautiful prairie one, covered with either lowing herds of cattle, or vast waving fields of corn. Some of the towns were very beautiful in appearance but Bloomington was by far the nicest looking town between Mexico and Chicago.

Nothaving closed my eyes in sleep the previous night, I determined before reaching Chicago, to stop there and gat a good "square meal," and f. possible, a quiet evenings rest; and no sooner had I stepped from the car, than I was grabbed by hotel drummers and coachmen in abundance, but being tired and sick, I let the strongest prevail who finally succeeded in pulling me through an immense growd and seated me in s private back. I say private back, because I had it all to myself, and of course I was private. I had received a hotel register before leaving the car, and having looked over and found a greater number of Missourians registered at the Atlantic House than any other, ordered my driver to take me to that place. spent the evening very pleasantly in looking over the city and before nine o'clock came to the conclusion that Chicago was a large and finely International exposition. or the "young Centennial," as it is there called. Having often heard of the Lake, I determined to go down and see if it was really as large as it was reputed to be, and to my surprise, on coming to the shore, rs far as eye could reach nothing but a vast body of water with an occasional ship under full sail, could be seen on every side except the one on which I was standing. I saw the tide come and go and heard the gentle murmurings of the waters of which the poets write; and was wishing for the language of a poet myself, that I might describe the aublime scene, when all at once a gale from off the Lake give me such a sudden chill, that I was driven from poetic thoughts to fiery

The next morning I boarded the Michigan Central train and was hastily borne along the shore of the -Lake at least five or six miles, and then left the Lake going through an immense plain of low flat and marshy country, covered with a very coarse grass. There seemed to be no im proved farms along this part of the road. But away off to the east could be seen the immense belt of cliffs encircling the lake. The cliffs seem to lie near the water's edge, and in some places tower several .hundred feet, with nothing but limestone and sand brought in by the tidal wave. The geological view 7.10 .nc the Lake plainly shows that after the subsidence which was necessary to torm the Lake, these cliffs of rock must bave been thrown up by some kind of volcario eruption. The strata seem very much up turn ed, and almost void of any signs of uniformity. We were in sight of the cliffs for about fifty miles when of the circuit court of Audrain county, we came directly to the Lake again at Michigan City. Here we left the favor of D. E. Shea, administrator of W. the Lake and its beautiful scenery and went into a wooded country in ery must come to a close. A woman from Iowa who was seated near who had been forced to collect an immense amount of gas, now burst of that day, at the east front door of the forth upon me. First telling me all abouther country, herself and everything she ever knew. And to my great astonishment, when her store of gas was about exhausted she at once assailed me with such an army of questions that I was compelled to deviate from the path of veracity and wander out into the road of du plicity, in order that I might frame moswers to all her questions. At last to get rid of her, I told her that I was from Missouri and was on my way up to northern Ohie, to take the stump for Tilden and Hendricks. At this she gave me such a lecture on politics that I was glad to find a chance not to open my head again. I had felt that I had left all thoughts of the girls behind me, but now I found myself contrasting our modest Missouri girls with this bold and outspoken one from a northern

I was really glad when we came into Ann Arbor, if for no other reason that I might get clear of my company. This is the most beautiful town I ever saw; situated upon a beautiful eminence about two hundred and forty-six miles north-east of Chicago, and about thirty-eight west from Detroit. The streets are wile, well graded, and shaded from both sides with maple trees.

The first night I was in town, the Republicans had a grand rally and a speech was made by the Congressman from this District, a Mr. Wil' let. The speech was one of the du'lest and driest I ever listened to. I anxiously vanted to see our Ethe. opian Mr. Cole, that he might make one in contrast. He said the major the approaching November election. part of the Democratic party were rebels and not to be trusted, and that the Republican party was the one which saved the Union, there- tion. fore to the victor's belong the spoils, and they should be continued in power on that account. He tried to demonstrate to his auditors, that Grant's administration was more economical and more honest than the administration of Washington, which built town. The people of Chicago of course he utterly failed in doing. seem to be full of life and energy, He finally said the stealages had and highly enthusiastic over their been less than was ever before known. Such logic and false assertions, and so patent too, I think won more Democratic voters than if he had made no speech at all.

> The Law Department of the University will open Monday. A large number of students are attending the University; in all departments about 1,200. Not having seen much of the school yet, of course can give no description.

I was at the depot this evening, and saw our friends, Messrs. Tureman and Guthrie, wending their way toward the Centennial. They manifested as much pleasure in seeing me, as I felt in seeing them.

I am very much pleased with the prospect of a good school here, and will no doubt be benefitted by com-

I have found nothing really objec tionable, except the political complexion of the people, which is hopelessly Republican. However we have many Democrats here, good bonest men, filled with a true love tor their country, who have fearlessly heisted many banners, bearing the inscription, Tilden Hendricks and Reform !

The medical students of this place have the corpses of the Younger boys, that were killed in Minnesota, and when the cold weather comes will dissect them.

Brigham Young has a son here attending school.

Having complied with my promise, and given you all the notes of interest connected with my journey, I am, respectfully, still a Missourian.

I had amused myself splendidly, looking at the scenery up to this point; but now all thoughts of scenery must come to a close A wo.

WEDNESDAY, THE 11TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1876,

FROM COLORADO.

The latest returns from Colorado gleaned from the Kansas City Times as we go to press promise a large Democratic majority. We can't tell for sure, but without a doubt it will go Democratic.
